

Divinity of Viswakarma

Viswakarma is a significant deity in Hinduism, known as the divine architect and craftsman. He plays a crucial role in the Hindu pantheon and is revered as the master architect and engineer of the universe, responsible for creating and designing various elements of the cosmos.

Viswakarma is credited with creating and designing various celestial and divine creations across ages. These creations include:

Dwarka: Viswakarma is believed to have built the legendary city of Dwarka, which was the capital of Lord Krishna's kingdom. Dwarka was a magnificent and prosperous city.

Hastinapura: Viswakarma is also credited with designing and constructing the city of Hastinapura, which was the capital of the Kuru dynasty and the Pandavas' kingdom in the epic Mahabharata.

Celestial Palaces: Viswakarma is known for designing and building the opulent palaces of the gods and goddesses in the heavens. These celestial palaces are described in various Hindu scriptures as grand and beautiful structures.

Divine Weapons: Viswakarma is the creator of several powerful weapons used by gods and heroes in Hindu mythology. For example, he is said to have crafted Lord Indra's Vajra (thunderbolt), Lord Shiva's Trident (Trishul), and Lord Krishna's Sudarshana Chakra.

Divine Vehicles: He is also responsible for designing the divine vehicles of various deities. For instance, he crafted Lord Brahma's swan, Lord Vishnu's Garuda (eagle), and Goddess Saraswati's peacock as their respective mounts.

Celestial Jewelry: Viswakarma is credited with creating exquisite jewelry and ornaments for gods and goddesses, including divine crowns, necklaces, and other adornments.

Astronomical Instruments: In some interpretations, Viswakarma is associated with creating advanced astronomical instruments used by ancient seers and scholars to study the heavens and calculate celestial events.

Pashupatastra: He is said to have crafted the Pashupatastra, a potent and destructive weapon given to Lord Shiva. This weapon is capable of devastating power and was used by Lord Shiva in times of great need.